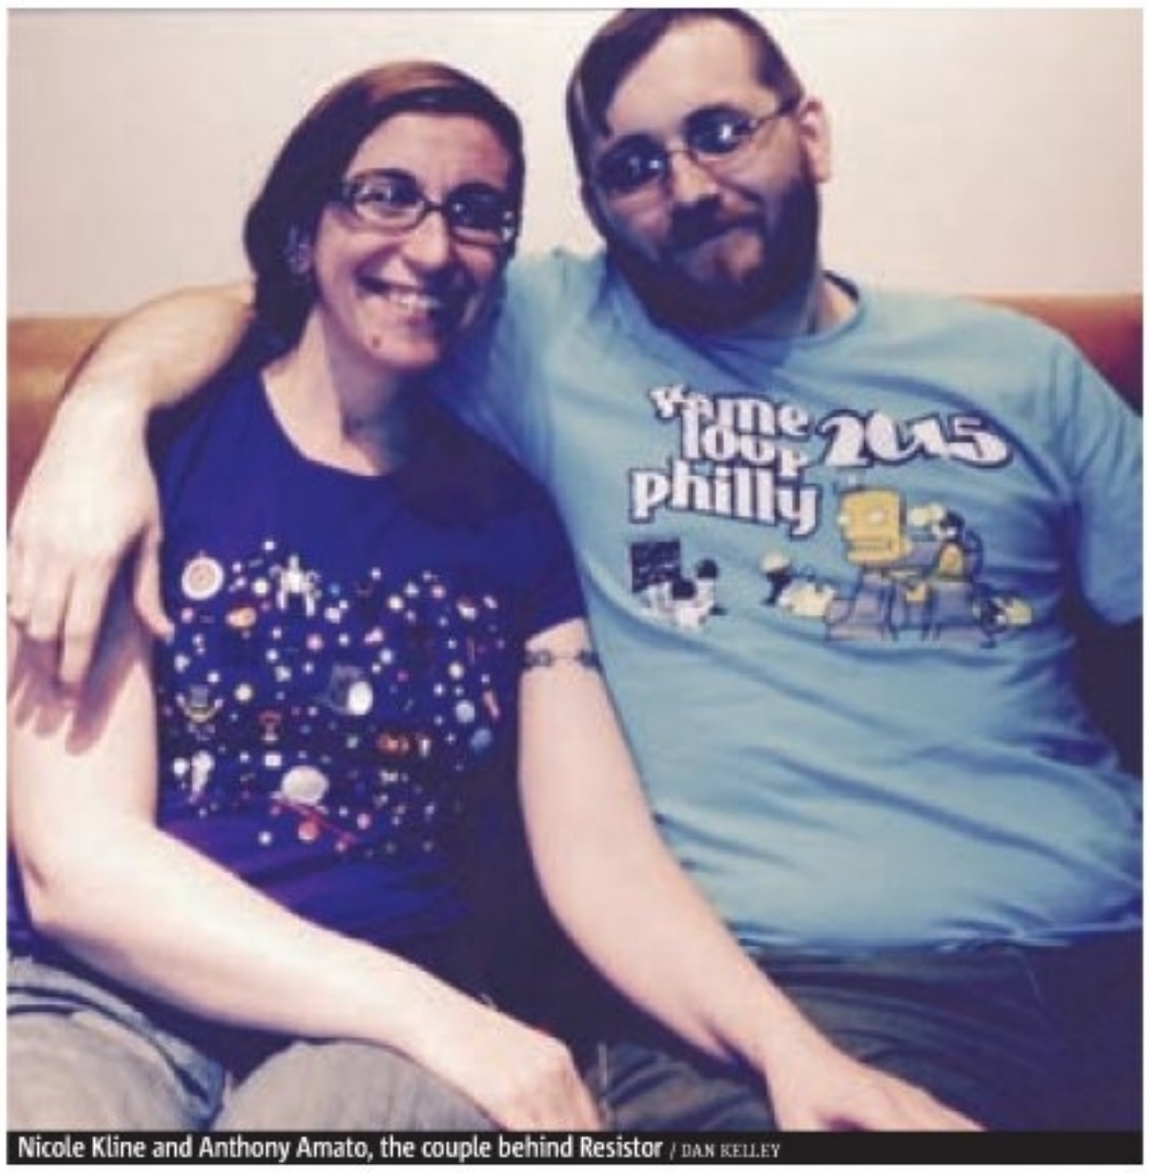
New board games more than a role of the dice

All fun and games. Philly has a large community of local board game designers fueled by fun, and crowdfunding.



Nicole Kline and Anthony Amato, the couple behind Resistor / DAN KELLEY

Nicole Kline and Anthony Amato had an idea for a card game called Resistor.

When they needed money, they turned to a crowdfunding site.

For everything else, they turned to the advice of the surprisingly large community of independent board game producers in the Delaware Valley.

"It's such a cool industry," Kline said. "It's like, OK. Everybody was me at one point."

Board games, card games and role-playing games — the industry lumps these together as tabletop games — have made something of a comeback among consumers looking for an in-person social experience.

Bars and restaurants have begun stocking them or hosting game nights, while industry experts say more retail stores than ever are able to sell games and survive.

That resurgence has fueled local game designers, who, more often than not, turn to websites like Kickstarter or Indiegogo to get their projects off the ground.

The area boasts no fewer than four groups which hold monthly events where indie designers can show off their ideas and play unpublished prototypes.

"Philly has a really good group here," said Jason Tagmire, a South Jersey resident who has produced seven or eight games. "I know people from New York who come to Philly meetups."

One of the most important phases of game-designing is play-testing and feedback.

The gamer meetups help meet that need.

"It's important to not just make, but play games, so you know what's going on," Amato said.

Jonathan Cooper, maker of a bar game called Thinking & Drinking, which poses questions like "If giving up cheese made you immortal, would you do it?" raised $27,000 on Kickstarter, and said his best testers included family and friends. But he also gave some to bars for testing.

"Rather than us being there, we said, 'Why don't you just use it, so we were not influencing it and getting responses from people that are just trying to be kind,'" Cooper said.

The game designers caution that making these is not a full-time job, or even a lucrative hobby.

"If these games sell 10,000 copies, they're doing really well," said Chris Kemmerer, owner of The Game Keep in West Chester, a store that stocks more than 2,500 indie game titles, many of which, he admits, take a bit of time to sell.

That doesn't deter the game designers, many of whom are motivated by an intense interest in the hobby.

"Most of the time, if somebody is heavy into board games, they're going to make their own," said Jason Tagmire. "You're thinking about what makes this game better, and by the time they say that, you probably have a game in your mind."

Philly. $3.3 million worth of heroin off streets in major bust

Authorities announced Wednesday that they tracked the source of a massive quantity of heroin to a house on a quiet street in Northeast Philadelphia.

District Attorney Seth Williams and investigators from the DEA "dismantled a significant drug trafficking organization" during a recent raid, according to investigators, seizing more than $3.3 million worth of heroin.

Suspects Martin Paulino Gomez, Domingo Cedno Pimentel and Ricardo Ortiz-Rolon, aka Acquiles Perez-Gomera, were arrested and now face federal charges of racketeering and drug possession with intent to deliver.

"We're working to shut down drug houses like these in order to make our neighborhoods safer," Williams said in a statement.

Investigators found a total of 10 kilos of heroin. SAM NEWHOUSE

Amtrak engineer was not on phone before crash

Amtrak engineer Brandon Bostian was not talking or texting on his cellphone when his speeding passenger train derailed in Philadelphia on May 12, killing eight people and injuring more than 200 others, federal crash investigators said on Wednesday.

Officials, however, are still trying to determine whether Bostian could have been using the device in some other way that would not have required a wireless connection, such as playing games or reading, according to the National Transportation Safety Board.

'Voice.' Singer Anthony Riley's family raising money for funeral

Family and friends of Anthony Riley, the street singer and contestant on "The Voice" who was found dead last week, are trying to raise money for his funeral expenses.

"We're going to sing a few songs and remember my brother," said Halima Miley, Riley's sister, before a planned candlelight vigil at Rittenhouse Square Wednesday night. "That's where it all started. That's where he made national news."

A Philadelphia native, Riley was best known as a contestant in the current season of NBC's hit singing competition. But he rose to prominence after he was arrested in the park for singing Sam Cooke's "A Change is Going to Come." He sued the city, and the case was settled out of court.

"He got into it. He said, 'I'm gonna do this. I'm gonna go to jail for singing,'" Robby Parsons, a West Virginia native who was performing with Riley when he was taken into custody, told Metro.

On "The Voice," Riley instantly won over all four judges with his electrifying rendition of James Brown's "I Got You (I Feel Good)."

Last year, Philly magazine named Riley the city's best street performer. "You notice a gorgeous stranger. Your eyes meet. And suddenly you forget why you were so stressed out to begin with. Riley is that good," they wrote.

The crooner was found dead of an apparent suicide on Friday. But rumors about a drug problem swirled since March when he abruptly left "The Voice." Family and friends say he was battling different demons.

"He didn't have a drug problem," Parsons said. "He had mental illness. The drugs were part of his self-help."

After leaving "The Voice," Riley went into rehab. He then stayed with Parsons and recorded music with him. DAN KELLEY

SATURDAY, JUNE 13TH
FRED BEANS HISTORIC USED CAR SALE

Doylestown, PA – Fred Beans, CEO and founder of the Fred Beans Automotive Group located in Doylestown, PA, has announced a ONE DAY SALE on Saturday, June 13th at 9:00AM, where pre-owned vehicles will be sold for as low as $999. This sale is being held due to overwhelming public demand.

Cars will be clearly marked, so come early for the best selection. This is a ONE DAY ONLY sale designed to get the local community driving again.

Fred Beans' pre-owned inventory levels need to be reduced to make room for shipments of new models arriving daily. As a result, all 8 Fred Beans Doylestown locations are selling these overstocked pre-owned vehicles to the public at drastic discounts in an attempt to clear excess inventory.

In addition to this huge variety of pre-owned vehicles, the Fred Beans Family of Dealerships in Doylestown features new Ford, Lincoln, Mitsubishi, Dodge, Chrysler, Jeep, Hyundai, Nissan, Subaru, Chevrolet, Cadillac, Buick, and GMC vehicles.

Fred Beans believes reviving the economy starts at home, and changing things locally will lead to changing things nationally.

In addition to the Fred Beans Family of Dealerships' extra inventory, additional vehicles have been acquired for this sale at incredible prices from various banks, repossession companies, auto auctions, credit unions, lease companies, and rental companies.

The sale will make pre-owned vehicles available for as low as $999,* prices not normally offered to the general public. According to Fred Beans, "We want to give our customers a reason to believe in the local economy again. Someone has to look out for their best interest."

Customers are encouraged to arrive and register by 8:15AM to inspect the entire inventory and find the car that's right for them. Every vehicle will be cleaned, detailed, and fully prepared for instant delivery. On the evening of June 12th, after the close of business, Mr. Beans and his team will mark the special sale price on each and every vehicle.

Because Fred Beans' customers are feeling the credit crunch right now, the Fred Beans Automotive Group has given the dealerships' financing managers the resources necessary to get most customers' credit approved on the spot.

The Fred Beans Family of Dealerships has $10 million in lending power, the result of over 50 years of strong relationships with the area's leading lenders. This means that customers with less-than-perfect credit history can have their credit approved and drive home a quality pre-owned car, truck, or SUV by lunchtime on Saturday.

Even if a customer's credit report shows a bankruptcy, divorce, tax lien, slow payment history, missed payment, or repossession, or if a customer is a first-time buyer, Fred Beans may get them approved.

This special ONE DAY ONLY sale will be held at all 8 Fred Beans Doylestown locations this Saturday, June 13th at 9:00AM.

Pre-owned vehicles will be sold for as low as $999.* Customers are encouraged to arrive and register by 8:15AM for the start of inspection. Incredible sale prices, starting as low as $999,* will be posted no later than 8:00AM. All vehicles will be sold on a first-come, first-served basis. The Fred Beans Family of Dealerships is expecting a high volume of customers for this sale, so be sure to reserve your spot early.

Customers wishing to trade in a vehicle are asked to bring their title or payment book for immediate delivery. Fred Beans will even pay off your trade-in in full, no matter how much you still owe on it.*

Most of these surplus pre-owned vehicles will get sent directly to auto auctions for liquidation. So if anyone has been thinking about purchasing a good, clean, dependable pre-owned car, truck, van, or sport utility vehicle, don't miss this special ONE DAY ONLY sale.

Courtesy transportation is available from all local airports, train stations and bus depots.

For more information about this sale and directions to our locations, please visit us online at www.999sale.com or call 866-920-9612.

*At least four vehicles on Fred Beans' lots will be sold for as low as $999 on June 13th, 2015. All offers to qualified buyers. Cannot be combined with other offers.

Tate-Brown shooting protestors acquitted

Let off. The so-called "Philly 10" were acquitted at their summary trial.

A group known as the "Philly 10" — who were arrested while demanding the release of the names of officers involved in the fatal shooting of Brandon Tate-Brown — were acquitted of disorderly conduct charges on Wednesday at a summary trial.

Ironically, the decision came one day after their demands were partially met.

Mayor Michael Nutter ordered the public release online of records from the investigation Tuesday.

The records were also requested by Tate-Brown's mother in a lawsuit filed against the city demanding that it comply with police reforms ordered by the U.S. Department of Justice in a recent report.

"If it wasn't for you, the names Heng Dang and Nicholas Carelli wouldn't be out there," Tanya Brown-Dickerson told the protesters outside of court after the hearing.

Surveillance video of the shooting was also released and posted online by Brown-Dickerson's lawyer.

"The struggle continues," Earl Pittman, aka Asa Khalif, one of the acquitted, said outside of court. "Now we are asking for that officer [Carelli] to be prosecuted."

Khalif, Carmen Spoto, Scott Williams, Joseph Quinn, Durmel Coleman, Caleb Gallus, Rufus Farmer, Mallori Malachi and Megan Malachi sat in a courtroom packed with about 50 supporters for a multihour hearing before they were acquitted by Judge Joyce Eubanks.

The "Philly 10" were acquitted Wednesday. / FILE PHOTO

The 10 were arrested on March 19, after a raucous protest in the Lawncrest Recreation Center, during a community meeting to discuss police issues that was attended by District Attorney Seth Williams and Commissioner Charles Ramsey.

Earlier that day, Williams had announced that his office would not file charges against the officers involved in Tate-Brown's death on Dec. 15, calling the shooting "a tragedy, not a crime."

This week's edition of City Paper / CITY PAPER

In this week's edition, City Paper takes a booklover's tour of the literary highlights of Philadelphia. Ride along as Lynn Rosen and Susan Barr-Toman take you on an Idego bike-share route from Logan Square to West Philly.

Elsewhere, the literary theme continues with a full-page cartoon paying homage to Bloomsday, on June 16 of course. Rob Berry's comic tells James Joyce's "Ulysses" all in one page.

Restaurant critic Adam Erace explains how soft-serve ice cream, once only a boardwalk treat, has taken on a new twist with custom flavors at the newly opened Big Gay Ice Cream shop.

Reviewer Mark Cofta writes that InterAct theater company's new comedy, "The Three Christs of Manhattan," is entertaining, but thin. He says it misses an opportunity to make a point about real issues — like how religion fits into our lives.

Bridging the generation gap in the gay community has gotten an assist from the Mural Arts program. Thirty billboards are going up around town showing the faces of gays youths and seniors, each with their eyes open to show strength and shut to show vulnerability.

New York. Manhunt for escaped inmates expands to Vermont

Richard Matt and David Sweat / NY STATE POLICE

The manhunt for two inmates who escaped from a New York maximum security prison expanded to neighboring Vermont on Wednesday as the pair set a record for the longest jailbreak in New York history, authorities said.

Richard Matt, 48, and David Sweat, 34, escaped from Clinton Correctional Facility in Dannemora, New York, five days ago, cutting through steel walls, squeezing through a steam pipe and popping out of a manhole.

More than 450 state, federal and local law enforcement agents were searching the area north of New York's rugged Adirondack Park on Wednesday, with the search extending into neighboring Vermont, New York State Police Superintendent Joseph D'Amico told reporters.

They may have had help from a female prison worker who befriended the inmates, New York State Police said on Wednesday.

Prior to escaping, the men discussed heading for Vermont, a rural state with dense forests and seasonal cabins, accessible by a ferry across Lake Champlain, about 40 miles south of the prison, police said.

The longest previous escape from a New York prison lasted just three days, according to data from the New York Department of Corrections and Community Supervision. In other New York state prison escapes, freedom lasted less than six hours for 60 percent of the 30 inmates who succeeded in fleeing in the last decade.

Elaborate escape schemes generally require equally detailed plans for fleeing the area and living life under the radar. That is where most fugitives fall short.

"When you escape, not only do you need the essentials like clothing, food and shelter, but you need some sort of long-term plan where your identity will be hidden," said researcher Bryce Peterson, who focuses on inmates and prisons for the Urban Institute's Justice Policy Center.

International publicity surrounding the upstate New York prison break, including photographs and physical descriptions of the tattooed men, make it extremely difficult for them to remain in the shadows, he said. REUTERS

Things to know

Here's what we know:

- David Sweat stands at 5 feet 11 inches and weighs 165 pounds. He reportedly has "Rebel" tattooed on his left bicep and "IFB" on his fingers.
- Richard Matt, who was also known as "Hacksaw" in the slammer, stands at 6 feet, weighs 210 pounds and features several tattoos (one of which reads "Mexico Forever").
- Prison officials are reportedly interviewing all those employed by the prison to find out who exactly helped Sweat and Matt escape.
- Investigators think a woman who worked with Richard Matt and David Sweat at the Clinton Correctional Facility planned to pick the convicted killers up after they escaped but changed her mind at the last minute, a source familiar with the investigation tells CNN. She reportedly checked herself into a hospital because of a panic attack and has not been charged.

Obama orders deployment of up to 450 more troops to Iraq

President Barack Obama on Wednesday ordered the deployment of up to 450 more U.S. troops and the establishment of a new training base in Iraq's Anbar province to help rebuild Iraqi forces in preparation for a battle to retake territory lost to Islamic State.

The plan to expand the 3,100-strong U.S. contingent of trainers and advisers in Iraq marks an adjustment in strategy for Obama, who has faced mounting pressure to do more to blunt the momentum of Islamic State insurgents.

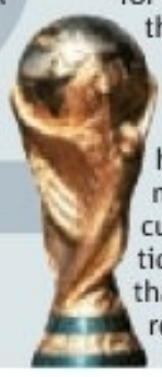
Obama decided on the new troop deployment in response to a request from Iraqi Prime Minister Haider al-Abadi, the White House said. The two leaders met on the margins of the G7 summit in Germany earlier this week.

But with Obama sticking to his refusal to send troops into combat or even close to the front lines, it is unlikely to silence critics who say the limited U.S. military role in the conflict is not enough to turn the tide of battle.

U.S. officials hope that a strengthened American presence on the ground in Anbar will help Iraqi forces devise a counterattack to retake the provincial capital Ramadi, which insurgents seized last month in an onslaught that further exposed the shortcomings of the Iraqi army. REUTERS

FIFA shelves bidding for 2026 World Cup

Scandal-plagued FIFA postponed the bidding for the right to host the 2026 World Cup on Wednesday and embarked on a search to find a replacement for the outgoing FIFA president, Sepp Blatter.



Jerome Valcke, the secretary general of FIFA, said during an event in Russia that it would be "nonsense" to start the bidding process for the tournament for the time being.

Meanwhile, FIFA said its executive committee would hold an extraordinary meeting in July to discuss "various date options" for the congress that will elect Blatter's replacement. REUTERS

Jeb Bush says Putin is a 'bully'

Likely Republican presidential candidate Jeb Bush said on Wednesday that Russian President Vladimir Putin was a "bully," and the United States and its allies in Europe should be resolute in responding to Russian aggression.

Bush, the brother of former U.S. President George W. Bush, is on a five-day tour of Europe in a bid to prove his foreign policy credentials before he is expected to launch his candidacy for the Republican presidential nomination next week. REUTERS

Uber loses bid for arbitration in US driver lawsuits

Uber lost a bid to force arbitration in a lawsuit brought by its drivers as a U.S. judge ruled the smartphone-based taxi service's 2013 and 2014 employment contracts dealing with arbitration were "unconscionable and therefore unenforceable."

The ruling, from U.S. District Judge Edward Chen in San Francisco on Tuesday, allows the lawsuits over driver background checks to continue in federal court. Arbitration is generally viewed as a friendlier forum for corporate defendants. REUTERS

Pope backs new tribunal to probe bishops over sex abuse

Abuse. Victims' groups have been urging the Vatican to establish clear steps to make bishops more accountable.

Pope Francis arrives in St. Peter's Square for his weekly general audience in the Vatican City. / GETTY IMAGES

Pope Francis approved on Wednesday an unprecedented Vatican tribunal to judge bishops accused of covering up or failing to prevent sexual abuse of minors, but one victims' group branded the move as too little, too late.

A statement said the tribunal would come under the auspices of the Congregation for the Doctrine of the Faith, the Vatican's doctrinal arm, "to judge bishops with regard to crimes of the abuse of office when connected to the abuse of minors."

Vatican spokesman Father Federico Lombardi told reporters the bishops could also be judged if they had failed to take measures to prevent sexual abuse of minors.

The complaints against the bishops would initially be investigated by one of three Vatican departments, depending on the jurisdiction under which the bishops fall, before being judged by the doctrinal tribunal.

The U.S.-based Survivors Network of those Abused by Priests (SNAP) said the pope should have gone much further.

"[The pope] could have sacked dozens of complicit bishops. He has, however, sacked no one," SNAP said in a statement.

SNAP urged victims of abuse to "stay vigilant and withhold judgment until we see if and how this panel might act."

However, Anne Barrett Doyle of BishopAccountability.org, an independent group that helps tackle the issue in the Catholic church, cautiously welcomed the announcement.

"This development is potentially quite significant. For the first time, there may be a clear road map for disciplining bishops who conceal or enable child sexual abuse," she told Reuters in an email. REUTERS

Quoted

"Disciplining such powerful colleagues will be politically harrowing. But for the pope to make good on 'bishop accountability,' this new program must begin at the top."

Brewery files for 'Boston 2024' trademark attempt

Hopping to it. Amid the fight over the city's Olympic bid, Sam Adams seeks "Boston 2024" mark for the brewery.

Sam Adams Brewery in Boston / NICOLAUS CZARNECKI, METRO

As backers of Boston's embattled bid to host the 2024 Olympic Games struggle to overcome public opposition, the maker of the city's famous Sam Adams beer has jumped into the fray by applying for a "Boston 2024" beer trademark.

The Boston Beer Co. has applied to the U.S. Patent and Trademark Office for a trademark on the words "Boston 2024," which would be limited to beer, Jessica Paar, a spokeswoman for the brewery, said on Wednesday.

"We were introduced recently to members of the Boston 2024 Committee and had a very preliminary conversation about collaborating on a special beer in the future," Paar said. "There's nothing set in stone. It's just a fun idea we talked about."

The Boston 2024 host committee is in the midst of reworking its pitch to the city after polls showed more residents of Boston oppose the idea of hosting the Summer Games than support it.

A poll conducted for WBUR radio by the MassInc Polling Group and released on Wednesday showed 49 percent of respondents opposed the idea of having the Games in Boston. Just 39 percent of the 502 registered Massachusetts voters interviewed between June 4-6 supported it.

Opponents of the bid have raised concerns about the spiraling cost of recent Olympic Games, including the 2014 Winter Games in Sochi for which Russia spent more than $50 billion.

Proponents have said the Boston bid would cost just $9.5 billion and would be funded privately rather than with tax revenues.

Backers have called for a statewide ballot initiative in 2016 on whether to go ahead with the bid and said that without majority support, Boston would not challenge rivals including Rome; Paris and Hamburg, Germany, seeking the 2024 Games.

1 Jennifer Garner calls in the lawyers

This certainly won't help all those divorce rumors swirling around Ben Affleck and Jennifer Garner's marriage. The latest? "She can't take it anymore. She's been consulting with a high-profile divorce lawyer," a source tells Life & Style, adding that while Garner was in Montreal recently for work, "she got a call that Ben was 40 minutes late to pick up the kids from school. She had to scramble to arrange another ride for them." While that might not seem like a major infraction, it's apparently one of those last straw situations. "She doesn't trust Ben alone with the kids," the source says. "Custody is not negotiable." This sounds like it will be the opposite of fun.

2 Gwyneth Paltrow's awkward family vacation

For Brad and Jen's sake, let's hope that Gwyneth and Chris don't re-enact this scene from their 2002 Hawaii trip.

There's showing off that you're totally OK with your ex-husband dating again, and then there's this, which is just plain weird: Gwyneth Paltrow is planning, depending on how you look at it, a family vacation where she and Chris Martin each bring along their significant others — "Glee" co-creator Brad Falchuk for her, Jennifer Lawrence for him — or she's planning an intimate couples' retreat for the foursome that just so happens to also include their kids. Either way, yikes. "Gwyneth recognizes it's time for Jen to meet the whole family, and she wants Chris to be there for Brad's first proper bonding experience with the children," a source tells RadarOnline. "The plan is to spend a week together in Hawaii as soon as all their schedules permit but definitely before the end of summer." If you think this is a terrible idea, Lawrence is apparently right there with you: "Jen is dreading it," the source adds. "Chris is still spellbound by Gwyneth and her rules, so he's insisting on it." Happy trails?

3 Mindy Kaling doesn't appreciate being called a hot mess

The finicky folks over at GossipGirl.com went a bit out of their way to call out Mindy Kaling for her fashion choices by dubbing her a "hot mess" based on some of her recent red carpet looks. Oh, and they even snuck in a little dig at her fans, writing, "Mindy Kaling is one of those 'woman of the people' types who basics find soooooo hilars." That stings, Gossip Girl. That really stings. Anyway, Kaling was more than able to defend herself, tweeting back simply, "Whoa, you guys are d—s." And she has a point. XOXO.

Laverne Cox wants to spill secrets

Binge. The "Orange Is the New Black" star is desperate to talk about the show's new season.

Laverne Cox is very ready for Friday's premiere of the third season of "Orange Is the New Black" to go ahead and get here already, if only so that she can finally talk about new plot developments, particularly about her character, Sophia Burset. "I just want people to see it so we can really get into it," says Cox, who has been sworn to secrecy since filming the latest batch of episodes a few months ago.

Luckily for us, she is willing to tease a little bit of information. "The third season was my favorite of all three seasons to shoot," she says. "I think we just got deeper into who Sophia is, what makes her tick. I got to do some stuff that I've never gotten to do before that I've always wanted to do on camera."

But it's not just the trajectory of her character that had her so impressed. "Just the stories hit me in my gut, every single one. Every script I read I would just sit in my apartment — or on a plane, I was on a lot of planes — just being so moved to my core," Cox says. "There was one episode where I was like, 'OK, this is really serious. This is bigger than me.' I have to really honor the story, and you have to connect with something bigger than you. That's what it's really all about."

While we can only guess — for now — what that episode is all about, it's good to know that Cox shares a desire familiar to a lot of fans of the series. "I've told [series creator] Jenji [Kohan] I want to be in the writers' room, but that's never going to happen," Cox says. "I would just love to see how they do it. Are there cards or something? Just in terms of all these characters and keeping them organized and keeping the stories weaving together? That is my dream, to get in there. Eventually, eventually."

With its much-anticipated new season in the offing and the show already enjoying plenty of critical and awards love,

Women exhibiting eating disorder behaviors, Ages 18+

Drexel UNIVERSITY

Researchers at Drexel University and the University of Pennsylvania are seeking women engaging in eating disordered behaviors for a study funded by the National Institutes of Health. Women age 18 or older who have an eating problem that involves being too thin, binge eating, or both may be eligible for one of our studies. These studies examine the biological, behavioral, and neurological factors contributing to eating problems.

Eligible participants will visit Drexel and Penn four to five times over six months. Participation involves clinical interviews, completing questionnaires, and a blood draw. Depending on which study you participate in, you may also complete daily symptom recordings, a body scan, an fMRI scan, or an assessment of resting metabolic rate.

Compensation will be provided up to $500

Please call 215-553-7171 or e-mail

See Laverne Cox, left, in the new season of "Orange Is the New Black" this Friday on Netflix. / JOJO WHILDEN, NETFLIX

Cox feels confident in doing a little back-patting, especially given how Netflix and binge-watching have changed viewers' approach to TV. "It was 2013 when we premiered. Things have changed a lot in terms of the culture, and I love that we were kind of at the forefront of it," she says.

With a mostly female cast including an impressive number of women of color, the show is also at the forefront of the changing face of TV, something Cox is happy to see — but under one condition.

"An unprecedented number of pilots this season had 'minority' actors — I hate that word — actors from different racial and ethnic backgrounds, which is great but it's so weird," she says. "My whole thing is just that I don't like the idea of it being a trend because trends come and go. I like the idea of it being a real change that happens where we see the real diversity of this country represented on television."

KATNISS: STILL A GREAT FEMALE CHARACTER

The new trailer for the fifth "Hunger Games" film, featuring Jennifer Lawrence's Katniss Everdeen, just hit. / MURRAY CLOSE

Geek Girl in Hollywood

JENNA BUSCH

JENNA BUSCH TAKES ON THE WAY POP CULTURE SNUBS ITS FEMALE FANS. FOR MORE COLUMNS, VISIT METRO.US/JENNA-BUSCH AS WELL AS HER SITE, LEGION OF LEIA (WWW.LEGIONOFLEIA.COM)

The new trailer for "The Hunger Games: Mockingjay – Part 2" was just released and it once again reminded me how much I love Katniss Everdeen. She defies every stereotype of a heroine we've been brought up to know and love, and it's as refreshing as a giant bucket of ice water thrown in my face.

Katniss is just … different. She's hard, but not unbending. She's had to deal with the death of her father and a mother who's checked out; she has to take care of her sister and deal with famine and a society that prizes children fighting to the death in an arena for entertainment.

The thing is, she's not just hard. She hasn't turned into one of those kickass chicks we're shown who are so hard after rape/torture/loss of children and loved ones that they have no feelings left and therefore must be killed at the end, because we can't hook them up with someone. What guy can handle a chick "harder" than him, amirite?

Like any young woman, she thinks about love and relationships, but like anyone dealing with this sort of unimaginable trauma, she doesn't always have time for it. When she does, it's a product of real time spent together and shared hardships (Gale), or shared trauma and experiences (Peeta). It's not just gazing at a pretty guy (ahem, "Twilight") and thinking you're not good enough.

This is the sort of character I've been hoping for after years of seeing ciphers and Mary Sues. She's not there as mere scene dressing. She's not a fantasy creature who's above it all. She's not damaged goods who can't go on, though she is indeed damaged. She's a human being. She's fully realized. She's real. Before this franchise ends, I want to know that there are more Katnisses on the way.

Best Coast's best yet

Bethany Cosentino, half of the duo Best Coast, gets candid about insomnia, jealousy and breakups on the band's third album, "California Nights."

EMILY LAURENCE
@EmLaurence
emily.laurence@metro.us

When you write your lyrics as literally as Bethany Cosentino does, looking back at old songs is like flipping through an old diary. "Our first album, 'Crazy For You,' was very much a 22-year-old lovesick girl, and the next, 'The Only Place,' was when I was 24 and was sort of like, 'What the hell is going on?' The new album is still kind of like, 'What the hell is going on?' but I also have a better grasp," the 28-year-old tells us by phone from her native California.

Drake, California-style

But even if you're not touring in an alt-rock band, playing festivals like SXSW and Coachella, Cosentino promises you'll still relate.

"One of my favorite artists is Drake, and the reason why I like him so much is because even though he's a super-famous, rich rapper, he talks about experiences and feelings in his life that [anyone] can relate to," she says. "That's something that will always be a part of Best Coast. I want people to be able to relate."

Maintaining relationships

One of the staples of Best Coast — besides a happy, psychedelic soundscape — is Cosentino's commitment to singing blatantly about what she's feeling, be it trouble moving on ("Fine Without You"), insomnia ("Sleep Won't Ever Come") or intensely missing someone ("Fading Fast").

"I've been trying to manage being in a touring band while also having relationships," she explains. "You feel disconnected from the world that you were once a part of [when touring]."

Despite the tricky balance, Cosentino's excited to tour: "We're more confident on stage, so I look forward to fans experiencing that."

Best Coast's new album hints at '80s and '90s musical influences. / JANELL SHIRTCLIFF

Party with a purpose at Pride

This year's LGBT parade and festival celebrates the 50th anniversary of the Annual Reminders.

MADELINE PRESLAND
@MetroPhilly
letters@metro.us

The sea of rainbow flags waving through Center City toward a lively festival at Penn's Landing every summer signifies a day of celebration with an underlying purpose.

Sunday is the 27th annual Philly Pride, this year honoring the 50th anniversary of the Annual Reminders — the first organized gay rights protests in the country, which took place in front of Independence Hall.

More than 200 organizations, including vendors and sponsors, are participating in the Pride parade and festival. Headlining are LGBT activist Fran Drescher of "The Nanny" fame and Alex Newell, who played a transgender student on "Glee."

Equality Pennsylvania, the statewide LGBT advocacy organization, is joining in the celebration to get the word out about their ongoing mission of bringing equality to LGBT Pennsylvanians. Same-sex marriage is now legal here, but executive director Ted Martin is determined to end all discrimination based on sexual orientation or gender identity. The group records stories of LGBT discrimination and helps people share their stories with a wider audience.

"Our time at Pride fest is to celebrate the community, partake in the work for local advocates and educate the public on this campaign," says Martin.

"We're there to make sure that people know their stories matter, and that telling their stories to elected officials and the public is important."

Join the Philadelphia Gay Men's Chorus and many other local organizations in Sunday's Pride parade. PATRICK HAGERTY

The details

The parade kicks off in the heart of the Gayborhood, at 13th and Locust at 11:30 a.m. The festival gates open at noon at the Great Plaza at Penn's Landing. The parade is expected to get there around 1 p.m.

There's a $15 cover for the festival, or pick up a festival wristband for $10 Friday night at the Pride preparty, at 12th and Locust, from 6 to 10 p.m.

Gay Men's Chorus

One local organization taking part in the festivities aims to unite through a universal language: music.

The Philadelphia Gay Men's Chorus has been participating in both official and unofficial Pride events since the 1980s. This year they will have a float in the parade and run a booth where audition signups will be welcomed and encouraged.

"The men in the chorus are encouraged by a sense of giving back to the community," says Thom Wolfinger, outreach coordinator for the Chorus. "We have the ability to affect change in the minds of young people today, through music."

Jazz wizards the Bad Plus are awesome enough as a three-piece, but add Joshua Redman, one of the form's most celebrated contemporary sax players, and you kick it up a notch, as Emeril Lagasse likes to say. Redman has collaborated with the group on several occasions, but this one's been the biggest yet, culminating in an album that dropped on May 26.

The sounds of Puerto Rico

Jamaica has its reggae and Trinidad is famous for its calypso, but Puerto Rico is one of the most musically diverse islands in the Caribbean.

Puerto Rico has produced an impressive range of musicians, including famous names like Ricky Martin, Jose Feliciano, Rita Moreno, Daddy Yankee, Don "El Rey" Omar and Jerry Rivera. As a U.S. territory, it's also one of the easiest Caribbean islands to visit, requiring no U.S. passport and using U.S. dollars.

The island's history contributes to the wide range of styles you'll hear when you're there. When the Spaniards came, by way of Columbus in 1493, they brought with them religious and, later, classical music. Although born in Spain, the world-famous cellist Pablo Casals had a Puerto Rican mother and spent the last years of his life on the island. He's buried in the National Cemetery.

The period of Spanish rule was also a gateway for European folk music to come to the island. As in the U.S., folk music helped produce country music; the music created by the mountain-dwelling Jibaro people has been described as the island's equivalent of both folk and country.

The heavily drum-influenced bomba music was another import, brought to the island by African slaves in the 17th century. This is linked with plena music, which merged bomba with indigenous folk music, and produced the blend they call "bomba y plena."

> You'll hear unique instruments being played on the island, like the 10-stringed cuatro.

Bomba y plena gave birth to the island's most famous music: salsa! It didn't solely originate in Puerto Rico but was also influenced by Cuban son music, and since it burst on the scene in New York, it's been further influenced by other Latin American nations and musical styles, together producing a true fusion music.

You'll hear music everywhere in Puerto Rico — played on instruments ranging from Spanish classical guitars to local gourds to drums made from hollowed-out tree trunks. There are several unique instruments too, including the cuatro, a 10-stringed guitar derived from the Spanish guitar. But whatever instrument is used, whatever style of music is being played and wherever you listen to it, you'll definitely take the sounds of Puerto Rican music home with you from a vacation.

HERSHEY ENTERTAINMENT & RESORTS COMPANY

Create your own candy bar, eat chocolate-infused entrées and even indulge in a cocoa facial in the chocolate-scented air of "The Sweetest Place on Earth."

It's fitting that a city created by chocolate has a museum dedicated to the sweet decadence. The Hershey Story Museum in Hershey, Pa., tells the story of how Milton Hershey discovered the secret to making milk chocolate. Take a class in the interactive chocolate lab and sample chocolates from around the world.

Hershey Chocolate World follows a cocoa bean from rain forest to candy bar. There's a create-your-own-candy-bar station and a chocolate-themed live show — with audience participation.

Just inhaling the air in the gift shop/candy store is enough to get a massive sugar high. Burn off that energy at Hershey Park. The theme park boasts over 70 rides and attractions, including 13 roller coasters (the newest coaster is an indoor, glow-in-the-dark model), 20 kiddie rides, a five-acre water park and live shows. All of the usual carnival foods are for sale, plus allergen-free options.

Zoo America, part of Hershey Park, is home to over 200 different North American animals. They live in geographically appropriate habitats, designed to recreate their homes in the wild. A stroll through Hershey Gardens is a relaxing change of pace. It has 11 themed gardens including a butterfly house, a children's garden with activities for kids, a Zen-inspired Japanese garden and seasonal displays.

Even pampering is touched by chocolate. The Spa at Hotel Hershey is known for its chocolate treatments, like a cocoa facial and a soak in a whipped chocolate bath. There are spa service menus for women, men and kids 13 and older.

Hershey Lodge and Hersheypark Camping Resort offer packages for couples, families and friends; many include admissions with lodging. The Hershey website, HersheyPA.com, has links to those and more.

Horoscope

♊ Gemini | May 22-June 20
You will face an unpleasant consequence if people feel that you have been misleading. Before you convince others to join your mission, check your facts.

♋ Cancer | June 21-July 22
Think before you speak. Your heightened emotions will cause you to overreact. There is no need to be defensive if no one is threatening you.

♌ Leo | July 23-Aug. 22
Your charming ways will have people flocking to your side. Accept as many social invitations as you can.

♍ Virgo | Aug. 23-Sept. 22
Before you sign up for a loan, do an assessment of your financial status. Consult a banking adviser.

♎ Libra | Sept. 23-Oct. 22
You may be overwhelmed by the demands being put on you. Don't spread yourself too thin. It's perfectly fine to say no.

♏ Scorpio | Oct. 23-Nov. 21
Surround yourself with positive, upbeat people. Good moods are contagious, and you will feel your stress falling away once you loosen up. An intriguing partnership is on the horizon.

♐ Sagittarius | Nov. 22-Dec. 21
If your instincts tell you something is not right, listen to them. If you fall for a sales pitch, you will have regrets.

♑ Capricorn | Dec. 22-Jan. 20
You will alienate the people you live with if you try to force your opinions. Take a step back and let matters settle down before you spoil a relationship.

♒ Aquarius | Jan. 21-Feb. 18
Love, harmony and romance are highlighted. Plan an intimate liaison with a special someone, or get out and meet someone new.

♓ Pisces | Feb. 19-March 20
Introduce yourself to the person you have been admiring from a distance. You are likely to find a lot of common ground.

♈ Aries | March 21-April 20
You are likely to feel easily upset if you stay indoors today. Use your energy to complete outdoor chores or some physical activity.

♉ Taurus | April 21-May 21
A recent quarrel with someone will stress you out. Open up the lines of communication, declare your feelings and admit your shortcomings. EUGENIA LAST

Crybabies on campus

Jerry Seinfeld was spot-on regarding how political correctness on college campuses has taken the fun out of performing. There was a time when college campuses were cutting edge. The country's policies during the Vietnam War were challenged and changed due to the uprisings on college campuses. Today, college campuses are as edgy as a basketball and as exciting as a nursing home.

"We don't want to watch 'American Sniper'!" "Wah wah! You hurt my feelings!" "We are offended by everything and ban speakers from campus who don't agree with our views." Crybabies. College is a time to become independent, thinking adults.

Bad analysis

In Metro, I read this statement from Chris Rupkey, chief financial economist at Union Bank in New York: "This is more confirmation that the economy is indeed emerging from that soft patch in the first quarter and can pick up even faster in the next few months." From 2009, I read the same or similar conclusions at least six times! Before last week, my wife lost her job after 17 years in the company because the business [went] down; six people out of 19 were laid off.

Why do those analysts give us inaccurate information? Why don't they see that there are almost no "help wanted" signs? Only the number of those signs is the real indication of the economy's health.

Young receivers Agholor, Matthews have strong bond

NFL. Rookie Nelson Agholor doesn't need to look far for a role model at wideout with the Eagles.

Nelson Agholor was taken 20th by the Eagles in the draft for his athleticism and speed, but his character and hard work is what catches the eyes of many. These happen to be the same attributes that Jordan Matthews can brag about.

Through the first few weeks of Eagles' OTAs, onlookers, coaches and players alike agree that Agholor is doing whatever he can to prove and establish himself as a rookie.

Matthews accumulated 872 yards and eight touchdowns during his first year in the NFL, and looks to be a perfect mentor for the USC product.

Matthews will likely be Philly's go-to receiver. / CHARLES MOSTOLLER

Quoted

"It's nice when you have good veteran guys; these guys embrace the new guys. They love competition."
Mark Sanchez, on the Eagles' entangling of veterans and rookies

"We've developed a great relationship," Agholor said Tuesday of Matthews. "Rarely do you come into a situation where the guy in front of you who's proven himself opens his arms to you like Jordan has."

Since being drafted in 2014, Matthews has been noticed for his extra reps before and after practice. He'll also finish plays in drills, like 7-on-7s, by taking the ball all the way into the end zone regardless of defenders covering.

"It's about being a team," Agholor said, clearly inspired by his teammate's extra work. "I want to be one of those guys where my teammates can count on me. It's great to see leaders of this team continuously go hard every practice — it reminds you that this is the type of team that wins games."

Along with Matthews molding a bond with his fellow PAC-12 player, there is a clubhouse full of veteran pass-catchers to lend a hand.

"That whole room of receivers is like that," Kelly said. "I think Miles [Austin] has really had a great effect on that room in terms of being the older professional in the league, along with Riley [Cooper]. You got a couple of young guys with Jordan and Josh [Huff] now Nelson's thrown into the mix. It helps to have someone show you around, kind of how things operate and how things work. It's beneficial. A lot of our older players have done a great job acclimating the young guys."

The well-spoken Agholor is pushing for a starting job along with Matthews, Austin, Huff and Cooper. Few would be surprised if the two young wideouts are the starting tandem for Week 1 in Atlanta.

If Sam Bradford starts the season healthy, with the trio of Demarco Murray, Ryan Mathews and Darren Sproles behind him, it's hard to argue that a one-two punch of Agholor and Matthews won't provide another season of a deadly Kelly offense.

Phillies continue freefall

Things continue to get worse and worse for the Phillies, the latest setback a defeat at the hands of the also cellar-dwelling Reds. The Phillies smacked double-digit hits, but were unable to get runners during key at-bats. Jerome Williams took the loss while Cameron Rupp had both of Philly's RBIs.

76ers have options with No. 3 pick in NBA Draft

NBA. It seems clear that the Sixers will target a guard with the third overall pick on June 25.

The 76ers have their eye on many prospects, but the best fit is arguably Russell (above right). / GETTY IMAGES

As the NBA draft approaches on June 25, Sixers fans and analysts alike have been scouring the talent pool at the top of the draft and have come up with the best prospect in their eyes for the Sixers, who own the third overall pick.

Here's a list of five potential options for the Sixers at No. 3.

1 D'Angelo Russell, PG, Ohio State: The Sixers are in need of a point guard who can spread the floor for center Joel Embiid's return next season. D'Angelo Russell fits that billing perfectly. Last season at Ohio State, Russell shot 41 percent from beyond the arc, while averaging 19.3 points, 5.7 rebounds and 5.0 assists in 33.9 minutes per game. Also of note is his defensive rating of 94.5, which placed him ninth in the Big Ten when he was just a freshman. Questions surround his athleticism over other prospects available at the top of the draft, but nobody questions his talent. In the half court, he's drawn comparisons to James Harden and Manu Ginobli in terms of his craftiness both scoring and passing. That's very high praise for the 19-year-old.

2 Emmanuel Mudiay, PG, China: If for some reason Russell is off the board for the Sixers at No. 3, they should take some serious consideration in drafting point guard Emmanuel Mudiay, who is working out for the Sixers on June 16, according to SNY.TV. He averaged 18.0 points, 6.3 rebounds and 5.9 steals last season for the Guangdong Southern Tigers of the Chinese Basketball Association.

3 Justise Winslow, SF, Duke: Small forward Justise Winslow has the makings of the most NBA-ready defender and he's also one of the top athletes in the draft as well. Up until the 2015 NCAA national title game, Winslow had been on a tear in the tournament, averaging 17.2 points and 9.0 rebounds in four games.

4 Mario Hezonja, SG/SF, Croatia: One of the players with the most intrigue in this year's draft is Croatian wing Mario Hezonja. The 6-foot-8, 200-pound shooting sensation for FC Barcelona is an outstanding athlete as well who could develop into a very good player in the NBA. His main criticisms are his dribbling ability and defense, which may or may not develop over time, but his shooting ability is likely the highest out of any wing player on the Sixers' draft boards.

5 Stanley Johnson, SF, Arizona: The biggest reach for the Sixers on draft night would be to select small forward Stanley Johnson, currently projected to be taken at No. 10 on DraftExpress.com, with the third pick in the draft. Where as Winslow increased his stock during Duke's NCAA tournament run this past March, Johnson seemed to have hurt his a good deal. He shot just 7 of 26 (27%) in Arizona's final three tournament games, while averaging a mere 7.3 points per game.
